A NATIONAL COMPETITIVE EXHIBITION

FOREWORD

The Trustees of the Metropolitan Museum of Art take pleasure in presenting the national competitive exhibition, American Painting Today 1950, described in this catalogue. The paintings in oil, tempera and encaustic have been selected from all parts of the United States according to the terms of the prospectus mailed to the artists in May 1950. Five Regional Juries, meeting respectively at Santa Barbara for the Western States and Pacific Territories, Dallas for the Southwestern States, Chicago for the Middle-Western States, Richmond for the Southern States and New York for the Eastern States and General Atlantic Area, made preliminary selections which in turn were submitted in October to the National Jury. These juries are listed on subsequent pages together with the members of the Jury of Awards.

A total of 6,248 entries were submitted by as many contesting artists. It is interesting to note that, generally speaking, a little better than ten per cent of the entries survived their local juries. The following tally by region represents the total number sent on to New York for the National Jury's consideration:

Region	Paintings Submitted	Paintings Accepted
Dallas	302	62
Santa Barbara	623	84
Richmond	639	78
Chicago	1,018	116
New York	3,666	421
Total	6,248	761

The National Jury finally accepted 307 paintings. This includes one invited painting from each of twenty-seven jury members.

The response to the Museum's program by American artists as a whole has encouraged the Trustees in their determination to continue in the same direction and to give equal opportunity to artists working in other media. It is therefore proposed to hold a comparable exhibition of American Sculpture in December 1951.

to be followed by a third national competitive exhibition of Drawings, Water Colors and Prints in December 1952. The terms of these competitions together with the amounts offered in prizes will be announced in January. Thus, in a three-year cycle, the whole course of contemporary effort in this country will have been examined and new talent brought to the attention of the public. At that time the Museum will be in a better position to judge whether or not the artists themselves wish to see these exhibitions become a regular and revolving activity. In the meantime Mr. Hale will continue to provide by smaller group exhibitions and retrospective surveys an active interest in American art.

Coincident with the exhibition program, the Museum will continue in its acquisition of appropriate works by contemporary American artists for its permanent collections. During the past two years Mr. Hale, with the support of the Director and the Trustees' Committee on American Art, has been able to use certain accumulated balances from the Hearn Funds for the improvement and refinement of the paintings collections. This process will continue until those balances are exhausted; thereafter current work will be acquired from current income. Prints, drawings and water colors will likewise be bought from funds bequeathed to the Museum for the purchase of items in these specified media.

Realizing that the absence of any fund specially earmarked for the purchase of contemporary sculpture has resulted in an unintentional penalizing of American sculptors, the Trustees have authorized the Purchasing Committee to allocate out of unrestricted purchase funds a sum up to $100,000 to be used over a five-year period in the discretion of the Committee on Contemporary American Art. This fund will be employed for the improvement of the Museum's collection of American sculpture in the same way in which the Hearn Funds balances have recently been used for painting.

The Museum wishes to express its appreciation to the thousands of artists whose participation in this exhibition is proof of their confidence in the efforts of the Trustees to evolve an effective program of contemporary art, and it wishes to thank especially the art societies, museums and individuals who have so generously co-operated.

FRANCIS HENRY TAYLOR

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

I should like to express my appreciation to all those — and there are many thousands — who have contributed in such generous measure towards the success of American Painting Today 1950. I should like to offer my congratulations to all the artists represented in the exhibition. Their talent alone supports it. I should like to thank the many artists of established reputation who understood the spirit in which the exhibition was conceived and were willing to submit to the hazards of an open competition. And I should especially like to thank those who submitted to our juries and were rejected. I am aware of the trouble and expense they incurred on our behalf, of hopes engendered and destroyed. Yet had they not submitted, the exhibition would have lacked its essential character.

I should like to thank all the members of the Regional Juries, the National Jury and the Jury of Awards. I know from intimate association that they gave more than could be asked, that they were fully aware of their responsibilities to their fellow artists, that they served with integrity and devotion.

I should like to express my appreciation to the Regional Directors and to the staffs of the museums they represent for their kind collaboration: Jerry Bywaters of the Dallas Museum of Art, Donald Bear of the Santa Barbara Museum of Art, Frederick A. Sweet of the Art Institute of Chicago and Leslie Cheek of the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts. I am sincerely grateful to Roland J. McKinney, Consultant to the Metropolitan Museum, who is so largely responsible for the organization and presentation, in spirit and in detail, of American Painting Today 1950.

In preparing the exhibition I traveled to many towns and cities throughout the United States. I shall never be able to express my gratitude to all those who helped me, to all those who received me with warmth and hospitality.
